Once Had as Many as 3,200 Members spent studies in Preaching Tariff Reduction in 1888-its Jellification in 1862 Over Cleveland's Victory.

The Reform Club, which closed its house at 2 East Thirty-lith street a week ago and has p t our sale most of its furniture, ends its days as a social organization within two blocks of the place where they began. Nearly eighteen years ago the club which sprang from the old Free Trade club, opened its house at Thirty-third street, a few doors east of Fifth avenue. It then had about 300 resident members. made up chiefly of Democrats, Single Taxers and Mugwump Mr. Cleveland's tariff message of December, 1887, gave the club an immediate mission, and its committee on tariff reform at once set to work with vigor. In the campaign of 1888 the club spent about $70,000 in preaching tariff reduction, and acted as a sort of adjunct to the Democratic

Defeat did not interrupt the work of the club, and for the next four years it industriously spread its doctrines by means of printed matter. When the campaign of 1802 came on, the club was more active than ever, and it spent many thousands of dollars in the interests of Mr. Cleveland's second election

On the night of the election, when it became known that Mr. Cleveland was really successful, some of the younger men of the club gathered in the cafe, organized a meeting in celebration of the event, and from time to time auctioned off the temporary chairmanship of the body to the man who bid the highest number of bottles of champagne. When at length a bid of six quarts was high the bidder, whose name happened to be Lincoln was forced to assume the name of Thomas Jefferson before he was permitted to take

An interesting feature of the club's propaganda in this campaign was the joint debates on the tariff question at county fairs in this State. John E. Russell and William M. Springer went out as the club champions, and Gen. Grosvenor and Roswell G. Horr represented the Protective Tariff in this city.

Horr and Springer were pitted against Horr and Springer were pitted against each other at several places. Springer was grave and argumentative. Horr was comic in speech and aspect, and even the reformers voted him a good fellow. Horr's funniest hit, however, was an unconscious piece of humor. conscious piece of humor.

Addressing up in Ulster county a crowd of farmers who stood gaping toward the old man and staring beyond him to the round shoulder of a mountain that loomed over the scene, Horr exclaimed:

"Forty years ago, my friends, forty years ago, you never put a knife into your mouth at table without seeing upon it the brand of Sheffield."

The farmers never smiled, but the malicious reformers exchanged significant glances, though Mr. Springer was either Clinton avenue, was shot and seriously too dignified or too politic, when his turn came to speak, to touch upon Mr. Horr's feats with cold steel.

When the agitation for the enactment of the Australian ballot law came on in this State the Reform Club cooperated with several other organizations. Party, in urging the enactment of the measure. A comic sight of those times was Ollie Teall in Tuxedo coat and immaculate linen drinking cocktails in the club café! along with the representatives of the Labor | the back. Party while the plan of the ballot reform campaign was under discussion.

resident and about 2,000 non-residen members, the latter recruited in every State of the Union.

Under the stimulus of this growth the club removed to the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Twenty-seventh street, where it incurred a debt of about $390,000 in buying land and improving the house. That was the period of club expansion in New York, and all sorts of clubs, big and little, were buying houses and issuing

The Reform Club grew and prospered for a time after its removal, but, like all the heavily bonded clubs, it felt disastrously the hard times from 1893 to 1897. Its membership fell off, and when the Bryan cam-Posign of 1896 came on the club, seeing the tariff question sent to the rear and the silver question put forward, turned upon the Democratic party, and without calling itself Republican, entered heartily into the movement for sound money.

Subscriptions to its campaign fund poured In, and the doors of the club were thrown topen to a host of men who opposed both free silver and tariff reduction.

When the silver issue was fought to a finish, the club found itself with a heavy debt, a decreasing membership, and a large body of members indifferent or hostile to the principle upon which it was founded. The club struggled along with a small anmual deficit, until the trustees seized the opportunity of a movement in real estate to sell the house in Fifth avenue for a price that left the organization with a free and clear surplus of more than $50,000.

Then came a fight over the future of the club. It was urged that with $50,000 in cash, furniture enough for a big house and a membership of all classes amounting to more than 1,200, the club was in an ideal condition to take a somewhat cheaper site and go on. But the men who had been managing the organization for fifteen years believed that the thing to do was to kill the social side of the club and devote the bulk of its income to the propaganda.

In the end the club took its house in East Thirty-fifth street and wied to keep the social side going. Few persons came to the house, however, and the restaurant was a steady drain on the resources. A good deal of money was also spent on the Parker cam-

When it rad become plain that only a desperate effort could keep the social side of the 'club alive, the opportunity came to sell the Thirty-third street lease at a handsome profit. This was done, and after several meetings the club determined to shut up its house before the end of March.

Arrangements were made with the National Arts Club by which the members of the Reform Club should enjoy temporarily the privileges of that club's restaurant, and the Reform Club obtained also in the house of the Arts Club the use of a room for its committees. There is no room in the Arts Club for in Real Estate Office, and Seen Put Out the extensive library of the Reform Club. and all or part of that may go to Columbia University. The general library is considerable, and especially fstrong in history. The economic library is large, but not fully up to date. The library of municipal affairs is probably the best on that subject in the United States, except, of course, the Library of Congress. As a matter of fact, the activities of the

A few men in the club hope that it may yet revive as a social organization. Meanwhile it will have perhaps $70,000, the interest of which can be used for a mild propaganda, and the dues can be made almost nominal.

SHOT BY HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW. George P. Naughton, Who May Die, Accuses

Building Inspector Wilson. George P. Naughton, 27 years old, of 2014 wounded last night at 170th street and Clinton avenue. It is alleged that his brother-in-law, William Wilson, a building inspector, of 3414 Park avenue, shot him. Mrs. Naughton is in delicate health and is confined to her bed. She sent for her brother, Wilson, last evening. He arrived the Single Taxers and a branch of the Labor about 10:30 o'clock and met Naughton leaving the house. Converse's Connecticut Estate. GREENWICH, Conn., April 1 .- Two hundred Italians employed on the estate of E. C. Converse at Stanwich surrounded the manor house this morning and made a demonstration with clubs. An Italian named Joseph Santoras, who sells the Italians groceries, was authorized by the contractor to collect $1 from each of the men for rental of a shanty containing 200 bunks which they had used free the past bunks which they had used free the past winter. They refused to work to-day, and by night became so angry at Santoras and those who had worked inside the manor house that they sought to kill them.

A hundred Poles and many mechanics kept to work to-day, and the score of Italians who did so were obliged to draw lanters to pretent themselves.

To-night Sheriffs W. E. Ritch and Louis Richards of Bridgeport drove into town with a wagon load of fourteen Italians, the ring leaders of the Converse troubles, and locked them up. To-morrow Sheriff Richards will address all the Italians at the r and make efforts to prevent further BCFFALO, April 1 .- A well dressed man, who refused to give his name to the police, entered a restaurant on Michigan street this morning and attacked Mrs. Nellia Gaumer of 180 Swan street, who was eating breakfast there. The man punched the woman into unconsciousness before he could be stopped. Then a horrified ex-pression spread over his face and he explained that he had mistaken Mrs. Gaumer for his wife. The woman was removed to the Riverside Accident Hospital, where it was reported that her condition was

MANY SPECIALS WON BY ENTRIES FROM LONG ISLAND.

Mrs. Thomas's Old English Sheepdog Scoops in a Wide Range of Trophies-Noress Carrotts Best Local Bull Terrier and Rodney Coronation Best Buildeg

Brooklyn's dog show wound up yesterday, and next year the Long Island Kennel Club promises to repeat it on a still greater scale. A final allotment of the unclassified special prizes brought a new shuffle to the canine cards in the afternoon, but some of winners still retain a shred or two of the laurels they gained in the earlier classes. The Old English sheepdog owned by Mra O. S. Thomas, Endeliffe Conquest, was par-ticularly fortunate. This fine son of Stylish Boy won the Standard-Union cup for the best dog or bitch benched, Ernest P. Seixas's prizes for the best of the non-sporting and Wilson's prize for the best exhibited by a woman. Dr. De Mund's cup for the best brace of sporting dogs was won by the Rock Ridge Kennels, with the beagles Pyrola and Caution, and Joseph M. Dale's tankard for the best brace in the non-sporting classes will hereafter adorn the sideboard at Aquehung Farm, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt winning it with their French buildogs Champion Richelieu and Champion Sarah.

A cup for the best kennel of four of any one breed, the gift of Dwight Moore, the York Kennels won handily from the high class teams to oppose its Airedale terriers, the York Kennels also winning the Englewood Club's prize for the best brace of terriers pion York Sceptre. The Englewood Club's prize for the best terrier in novice classes went to Winthrop Rutherfurd's Norfolk Ranger. A gold medal for the best dog or bitch owned in Brooklyn, the gift of the Eagle, made more for Dr. A. P. Northridge's An ambulance in charge of Dr. Glanz | Champion Noress Carrotts, at the show as a non-competitive "looker on in Vienna," ex-cept for specials. John Hill's Clarendon cup, for the best owned by a member of the Long Island Kennel Club, to be won three times, was captured by M. W. Robinson with the Boston terrier Champion Colonel Monte. It was in competition last year fo the first time, when Winthrop Rutherfurd was the winner. Nearly all the big cups of the specialty clubs, offered with strings at the shows of the circuit, were in competition for the different breeds during the week, but save in the instance of Miss Anna Mark's final capture of Mrs. Howard Gould's cup for the best St. Bernard by virtue of a fifth win, the outcome did not concern any one but the owner.

Mrs. Howard Gould's cup for the best St. Bernard by virtue of a fifth win, the outcome did not concern any one but the owner. There were points of general interest, however, in the awards of several of the specials. The Preeident's cup, for the best American bred Russian wollhound, was awarded by Judge Kraus to Champion Boyar, bred by the judge and brought out by him originally. Ardagan, the dog's sire, was imported by Kraus, and Boyar made a hit when first shown, coming just as Champion Markman was fading away, and before the advent of the newcomers from Russia and England. The award to Boyar was fair, aside from sentiment, although some of the puppies were pushing the old dog closely.

A medal under the odd condition of for the best pointer owned by a member of the Middle Island Game Protective Association found an owner in Dr. H. J. Goubeaud's King Fashion. Dr. Goufeaud's Woodmere won another medal under similar conditions for English setters, but he had a more active competition to secure John F. Collins's cup for the best in the breed owned by a member of the L. I. K. A., winning again with Woodmere. An instance of brotherly love was a special from the Buffalo Kennel Chub. It was for the best Irish terrier, and Daffodil Farns won with Dermond.

Howard M. Maxwell's cup for the best Old English sheepdog was still another gaud for Mrs. Thomas with Endeliffe Conquest. There was plenty of local interest in the bull-dog specials. Robert Van Buren's cup for the best buildog puppy bred and exhibited by a member of the L. I. K. A. was awarded to U. S. Westervelt's Independence—a son-of Rodney Coronation, as it happens. To close the summary, there was a keen rivairy to gain the cup offered outright by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Offerman for the best American bred Scottish terrier in the novice classes, Mrs. H. T. Foote winning with Rochelle Taffy. F. J. Trown of the bench show committee was the donor of two cups: that for pointers being won by W. H. Hanley's Narragansett, and for buildogs by Robert Lobban's Shoe Town Pri

All night long the boys swarmed over the floor and kept up a continuous cannonade of yells, screams, catcalis, whoops, zipps and bazoos. The pandemonium was so intense at times that the mothers and sisters of some of the boys came on the floor and took a hand in the racket.
